Herald Editor Talks To Press Club

By Mary Frances MacGregor

Miss Louise Arnett, faculty advisor of the Press Club, was hostess at Marquand Hall at a tea given for the members on Friday, October 19. The guests of honor were: Miss Eleanor Fox, special correspondent to the Boston Transcript; Mrs. Laura C. Tanney, house mother of Marquand Hall; Mr. Leon C. Beeler, editor of the Northfield Herald; and Mr. Frank W. Pearsall, in charge of publicity of the Northfield Schools.

Following the tea, an informal discussion led by Mr. Beeler was held. The subject was newspaper work in general.

The members who attended were: Miss Sally Gilbert, Miss Muriel Parker, Miss Claribel Gee, Miss Marion Fernandez, Miss Emily Amidon, Miss Ethel Siegel, Miss Jean Olsen and Miss Mary Frances MacGregor.

Sunday Services

By Emily Amidon

The speaker at both services at Russell Sage Chapel on Sunday Oct. 21 was the Reverend Henry Pitt Van Dusen of New Haven, Connecticut.

"Faith," said Mr. Van Dusen, in his morning talk, "is one of the great fundamental words of religion." The kingdom was more on Jesus' tongue, but next came faith. Such men as Abraham believed and were men of action, and courage. Their whole life leaned toward adventure and we often hear them called the "catalogue of saints," for they belonged together due to an inner spirit feeling which they possessed. They served in works of faith and were marked by it. Two things marked these characters of faith—not what they believed but their capability of seeing and their daring spirit. The saw things more truly as they are, and as they might be, and as no ordinary person could see. Thus faith is sight—insight vision. Those men, as Abraham, didn't only see the vision but shared it with the world. They had faith in God—were certain of one whom they could trust and for whom it would be worth giving their lives for.

At Vesper service Rev. Van Dusen based his talk on the 139th psalm containing the lines: "Lord thou has searched me and known me. Thou knowest my down sitting and my uprising; Thou understandest my thoughts afar off. And are acquainted with all my ways."

This is exaggerated poetic imagery of a by-gone age. People give three kinds of reaction to such poetry. Some who hear it, think nothing of it and forget it. Some like to listen, get a sense of realism from it. But they fail to understand what it is all about. Others hearing it feel their spirits move at once and are at rest and peace. The tinkle of sound within suddenly becomes real. It will resound in full harmony if we give it a chance. The most of us must work our way by a slow pilgrimage until the inner meaning becomes real, and we won't advance unless we constantly expose ourselves to things we want to know—not only knowing and understanding such a poetic psalm but knowing things as music and friendship in their fullest meaning. "Search me, O God and know my heart: Try me and know my thoughts; And see if these be in any wicked way in me, And lead me in the way everlasting."

Prof. Duley of Northfield Seminary gave a very interesting talk on "The Beginning of Northfield Seminary and Mount Hermon Schools up to the Present Time."

A large audience really enjoyed the entertainment given by Mr. Charles Ross Taggart at the Town Hall in Vernon, Vt. Tuesday evening, Oct. 23. The price of admission for adults was only 30c it was worth double the amount and more. He kept the audience in a roar of laughter all through the entertainment by showing his skill as a ventriloquist in talking to "A boy in the piano." Impersonating a leading society woman, telling many humorous anecdotes and stories, playing his violin in all kinds of shapes, up in the air, sideways, backwards, frontside, bottom side up, on the floor, left handed, and many other unusual ways, dramatizing the old time fiddler, and the old time farmer. It is surely worth repeating many times over. A goodly sum of money was realized for the Union Church.

On Wednesday evening, Oct. 17, a party of over 20 of the members of the South Vernon P.T.A. and their friends went to Weatherhead Hollow, in Guilford, Vt. to join friends there and gave Miss Margaret Johnson a genuine surprise party.

The party greatly enjoyed the trip as they wended their way over mountain and valleys, thru hill and dale, around numerous abrupt curves for the evening air was warm and balmy. The party was a jolly crowd and the leader, Ernest W. Dunklee, President of the South Vernon P.T.A. was at his best, putting pep and enthusiasm into his followers.

Old time lanterns and kerosene lamps were used for lights, as electricity had not been introduced there at the schoolhouse.

The evening was pleasantly spent in singing the old time familiar hymns of long ago, by the audience with E. W. Dunklee as choir director and Mrs. C. I. Holton, organist.

Readings were given by Mrs. Eleanor Dunklee, Miss Maude Radway, Mrs. Nelson Pratt, Mrs. C. I. Holton, Mrs. Mary Cowles, R. E. Bruce and Mrs. M. H. Brown, each receiving hearty accolades.

Solos were sung by Mrs. Gertrude Gibson and Mrs. E. P. Edson.

The party broke up at a late hour wishing Miss Johnson much success in her future work.

A Halloween Party is to be given at the South School by the teachers, Miss Elizabeth Stearns and her pupils on Friday, at 7:30 P.M. Oct. 26. A small admission fee will be charged. The public are cordially invited. The proceeds are to be used in buying song books in the school.

Garden Club

I stood out in a meadow, the other morning, looked across the river at the hills. It was soon after a storm; thick gray clouds still covered the sky, and the flaming colors of the foliage were dimmed and dulled by faint mist. The gay yellows and reds were sober brown in the dreary light, and the grass beneath my feet, was heavy and sodden. It was a sad world, so dingy and threadbare, so worn and old. Suddenly, far to the north, I caught a glimpse of light. At first, I thought it but a sun-touched cloud, but I moved aside for a clearer view and far, far away, I saw the gleaming top of a distant hill. It glowed against the dull, gray sky—gem of shifting, iridescent light. The opalescent shows, that veiled it ever so faintly, did not hide, but enhanced the dream-like beauty, that floated like a mirage against the clouds. It was not a medley of colors, it was all the colors of the world blended into one. Green, gold, scarlet, crimson and violet, flowing into each other, their identity lost each in its neighbor. I watched, enchanted, and it did not matter that the place where I stood was dark and somber, for the real me was far away on the hilltop, where the sun was shining and there was warmth and radiance and glow.

It is ever the distant shining peak on the horizon, that lures men on. So often life would be unendurable, if we did not know that somewhere, perhaps unseen, the sun is shining. That somewhere the glory of heaven is touching the earth. So many weary days, we must walk alone. There is so much of pain, so much of loneliness, so much of heart-break. Friends betray and love grows cold. But always, if we but lift our eyes, the gleam of a distant hilltop holds out the hope of happiness and we press on eagerly toward a new day.

Hills have played a big part in the lives of men, and not the least of these has been inspiration. There is something about the high places of the earth that bring a measure of peace and contentment, to the troubled soul of man. There are those that spend their entire lives, scaling towering crags and cliffs, winning their way over crevasses, where a single mis-step would be death. Crawling like insects over glaciers and around precipices, all for the thrill that comes when the top is reached at last. But the lofty peaks are not for most of us, their very majesty fills us with awe, robs us of power. In their presence we feel insignificant, we are crushed by their magnificence. But the hills are ours, they are close to us and we feel kinship with them. They draw us on, away from trivialities up and away from the lesser things that seek to strangle and overwhelm. It was not an idle phrase of the psalmist when he sang, "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills, from whence cometh my help." He too had caught a glimpse of the eternal promise that is written on the High Places. The clouds may be threatening, the crooked trail we travel, may be strewn with rocks and snags; but the sun is shining on yonder peak, and the far-off ardiance of the Perfect Land is mirrored on the distant hills.

S.C.A. Representatives Speak

At the general assembly of the student body in Camp Hall Saturday noon, two delegates of the Student Christian Assembly, meeting last week-end at The Northfield, were present and addressed the students briefly.

Ably introduced by Mr. David Porter, the two delegates spoke of their connections with the Student Christian Assembly and of religious work in colleges.

Jack Fields, the first speaker, is an undergraduate of Yale, where he is a member of the swimming team. He spoke of his religious experiences, beginning at the age of fourteen, of his athletic friendships, and of his connections in Dwight Hall, the religious center of Yale University. His talk, both humorous and impressive, was greatly appreciated by the boys.

Ed Gurney, the other speaker, is editor of his college paper at Colby. He spoke of the religious life of the students at Colby and in other colleges, emphasizing the fact that we can get along without religion, but that we should not when it can mean so much to us and enrich us so greatly.

Last Sunday Mr. Roy W. Chamberlain was the speaker in the regular chapel service. Mr. Chamberlain was the speaker at the morning and evening services. This next Sunday the speaker will be Rev. Sidney Lovett from Yale University.

Saturday afternoon the Senior football team clashed with the Sophomores and came out on top with a score of 13-0 after a rather unevenly contested match. The Juniors lost to the freshmen after a bitterly fought battle on both sides. The score was 6-0. These results put the freshmen in first place in the intramural league with the Juniors and Seniors sharing the second place honors, and with the Sophomores bringing up the rear.

This Saturday will practically complete the intramural schedule, and the squads will begin an intensive training for the interschool meets which are not so far away.

Coach Francis Jayley has announced that on Nov. 10, the Mt. Hermon Cross-Country Track Team will meet the Springfield Freshmen in the second interschool meet of this kind for a great many years.

Practice Game With Greenfield

On Wednesday afternoon, Oct. 24, the football squad at Mount Hermon met the football squad of Greenfield High in a practice game. The results of the game are to be entirely a minor objective, as the game was arranged solely for the practice it will give the teams of both schools.

Last Saturday was a gala day for the social program of Mount Hermon and the Seminary. In the afternoon there was a privilege for the Junior and Sophomore classes and a tea in the social hall afterwards. The girls saw the football games, and left the school at five o'clock. They had no sooner left than the Senior girls arrived for a party. They had dinner in West Hall slightly earlier than the rest of the students of the school, and then repaired to the social hall where they danced until about eight o'clock. The following were the chaperons and honoraries present at the party:—

Mr. and Mrs. David R. Porter; Mr. and Mrs. William H. Morrow; Mr. and Mrs. Harry E. Erickson; Mr. and Mrs. Lester P. White; Mr. Carleton W. L'Hommiedieu; Mr. and Mrs. Peter Ingalls; and Miss Marion Keller. After the dancing the class was entertained by Commander MacMillan and his lecture on the Polar Regions.

Social Items

Mrs. Beulah Cooper entertained Miss White over the last week-end. Miss White is a resident of Keene, N. H., where she teaches in the Normal School.

Last Sunday evening Mr. and Mrs. Axel B. Forslund of Mount Hermon School, entertained Mr. and Mrs. Harlan L. Baxter in Cottage two.

Robert A. Rennie, a student at Mount Hermon, was appointed by the office to tutor the foreign boys in school who have a limited knowledge of English. Rennie is a Senior and is on the Dean's List. He has won his class numerals in indoor track.

Miss Mira B. Wilson last Wednesday noon addressed the students of Mount Hermon in the semi-weekly chapel service. Miss Wilson used as her topic, "Manners," and obtained her material from Emerson's essay on that subject.

Miss Prudie Moore entertained her brother on the campus over last week-end, Maurice M. Moore. Mr. Moore was a student at Mt. Hermon at one time.

The students and faculty of Mount Hermon had the good fortune Saturday evening of hearing in Camp Hall, a lecture by Commander Donald B. MacMillan, noted Arctic explorer, geologist, and author, concerning his fifteenth expedition to the Arctic. The eminent adventurer gave a vivid and picturesque account of the dangers, the hardships, the human interests, and the beauties encountered on such an expedition, including some of his experiences with the Peary Polar Expedition in 1909. The fifteenth expedition, its personnel composed of students and instructors of Bowdoin College, set out from Wiscasset, Maine in a tiny thirty-five foot boat to brave the ice and cold of the polar regions. After spending a year at Comdr. MacMillan's base on the east coast of Labrador, the party pushed on to Baffin Land, the forbidding, bleak and barren gateway to the North. From here, the ship was forced to break its way through hundreds of miles of ice, sometimes five feet thick. On several occasions, MacMillan had been ice-bound for a year at a time. Dog teams then took them over the remainder of the journey, which is over the treacherous ice of the Arctic Ocean. For two thousand miles the plucky dogs weaved their way through the crevices in the soft ice, which has held the secrets of the North Pole for centuries. Suddenly the food supply became exhausted, and the explorers were forced to retreat, for they well knew the fate of the 129 men in Sir John Franklin's party, who died of starvation. However, spring soon arrived and that was the time of beauty in the land of the Midnight Sun. Contrary to common belief, millions of flowers are in bloom, and great flocks of birds migrate from the south.

That was the time when Comdr. MacMillan's work began, for he was completing a history of North American bird life. Fellow botanists found 7000 different kinds of flowers at that time. Here too, they met the Eskimo that agile, dark-skinned brother of the Orientals, who survives on raw meat of seals and polar bears. Their work completed, the explorers started for home before the ice broke. Yet to prevent any art of their trip from being uneventful, Fate suddenly caused their tiny craft to be grounded on a reef. They successfully freed it from its precarious position, however, and reached the home port safely.

The student body and faculty were unanimous in their praise of the lecture, especially Comdr. MacMillan's portrayal of the bird and animal life of the Arctic. Following the lecture, many of his Hermon friends bade him God-speed on his sixteenth expedition, which will depart in the spring.

The Hinsdale Women's club met with Mrs. Albert F. Fisher, Oct. 16th. Mrs. George E. Robertson gave a very interesting talk on "National Recreation Parks." Refreshments were served by the hostess. The next meeting of the club will be on Oct. 30th at the home of Mrs. Edward R. Sander-son.

EDITORIALThe Speer Case

The Speer case has reached the stage where a new rumor is born every hour. None of these come from the police of course. They are still digging in and sifting out hoping for the clue that must be found before the tangled ball can be unwound.

One thing noticeable in the rumors that go around is the eagerness which this community takes them up and sends them along. Let's remember that rumor is not fact neither is it evidence in a court of law. In a case of this kind the burden of proof is on the State and no citizen need answer for himself until he or she has been accused. Let's knock the rumors down. They have no place in Northfield's way of living.

League Of Nations Questions And Answers

On the ballot for the coming election on Nov. 6, 1934, will appear a question asking the voters of Northfield (as part of the First Representative District of Franklin County) to indicate whether or not they would like to have the United States join the League of Nations. This question will be on the ballot in 115 towns and cities of Massachusetts.

In order that our readers may receive dependable information on the League, we shall present questions and answers in this space in the issues between now and Election Day.

The Editor

a. What are the General Functions that World Peace Machinery Must Fulfill If It Is to Be Successful?

1) It must provide a means for solving the underlying social, economic and financial problems which determine the happiness of mankind as a whole.
2) It must provide courts and arbitration methods by which nations can secure justice in the settlement of their disputes.
3) It must bring about limitation of armaments.
4) It must make it possible to settle crises between nations when war threatens or has actually broken out.

b. Are League of Nations Publications Available in This Country? The United States buys almost as many League documents as all the rest of the world put together. Monthly bulletins, an official journal, summaries, and documents covering the work of the Council, Assembly and various League conferences and commissions may be obtained from the World Peace Foundation American agents for League publications, at 40 Mt. Vernon St., Boston, Mass., or from the League of Nations Association, 8 West 40th Street, New York City.

Is the League of Nations a Super-State?

No, it is not a super-state, nor is it an alliance. By the terms of its Covenant it can never be either. It is simply a association of 58 nations for the purpose of maintaining peace and security through conciliation and conference. The organs of the League can take no action except by agreement, the fundamental purposes being arrived at by consultation among all the interests involved. Its procedure differs entirely from that of legislative or other familiar bodies. The Council differs essentially from a legislative body in that the parties concerned with the decision always participate in its deliberations. This is specifically provided for in the Covenant (Art. 4, Sec. 5). It is not correct to regard the Council as a body that reaches decisions by a majority vote of representatives, but rather as one which arrives at agreement through consideration of the views of all interests concerned. The Council as a whole lives up to the terms of the Covenant and reflects world sentiment. However, since decisions are normally attained by unanimity, it must always give full consideration to the views of any Member.

a. It Has Been Said That If The United States Were a Member, The League of Nations Could Call American Troops Abroad. Is This True?

In accordance with Section VIII of the Constitution of the United States, only the American Congress has the right to declare war. Therefore, the American Congress is the only body in the world which has the power to say when American troops shall take the field. The statement is based on Article X of the Covenant, which says that "The members of the League undertake to respect and preserve as against external aggression the territorial integrity and existing political independence of all members of the league." But the next sentence declares that "The Council shall advise upon the means by which this obligation shall be fulfilled."

Were the United States a member of the Council and if a situation arose seeming to call for exercising Article X, and if the United States representative disagreed with the other members of the Council, his single veto would be sufficient to arrest action. Furthermore, assuming that the Council were unanimous, it could only recommend what should be done and then the matter would have to go before the American Congress. If Congress said no, there is no power in the League Covenant to compel it to say yes.

b. Do the Terms of the Covenant Conflict With the American Monroe Doctrine?

Article XXI of the League Covenant states unequivocally that "nothing in this Covenant shall be deemed to affect the validity of international engagements, such as treaties of arbitration or regional understandings like the Monroe Doctrine for securing the maintenance of peace." As a matter of fact, the League of Nations Covenant extends to the whole world the principles underlying our own Monroe Doctrine.

XV

Views Of Prominent Americans On the League of Nations

1) Col. Charles A. Lindbergh:

The League considered for the first time the question of commercial air transport in July, 1930, when it constituted a new committee known as the Air Transport Co-operation Committee, to discuss the possibility of closer international co-operation in this field. As an eminent authority on air questions, Colonel Lindbergh was asked to express his views on this subject.

He was of the opinion that aviation must be considered from an international standpoint. There was great need for international co-operation in the standardization of airways; a uniform system of markings and signals should be decided upon and a comprehensive meteorological and radio-reporting system established.

The cable message which he sent to the League read in part: "Aviation does not concern one nation alone. Its ultimate value is in bringing the various countries of the earth in closer contact. It is not possible to develop air transport and communication in its broadest aspect without the co-operation of the whole world."

2) Herbert Hoover:

(From his message to Congress, December, 1931) "We have been deeply concerned over the situation in Manchuria. It seemed both wise and appropriate rather to aid and advise with the League of Nations, and thus have unity of world effort to maintain peace, than to take independent action."

3) Otto Kahn, of Kahn, Loeb and Company:

"I am not wholly sure that collective action is absolutely necessary in the case of all the principal nations, but I am quite sure that such action is eminently desirable and that it will greatly facilitate and hasten emergence from the depression."

"I think the best medium for endeavoring to inaugurate such co-operation is the League of Nations through the appointment of a special committee, unless the President of the United States can and will take the initiative with the approval of Congress."

4) Newton D. Baker:

"We efficient Americans want the League of Nations to act with the dramatic precision of a machine tool, when of course, the whole value of the League lies in the fact that it is neither dramatic or precise but flexible, constructive and conciliatory. The technique which the Secretariat has developed and the Council followed in the past ten years seems to me to have made the League grow steadily in effectiveness and usefulness, and... our American citizens must be given real knowledge if they are to be asked to give up their prejudices on this most important of subjects."

"I think the League has been handicapped in its efforts in the Far Eastern situation by the non-membership of the United States. Concerted action of the kind appropriate to be taken in a crisis like this ought to be worked out in conference and a serious obstacle is interposed when all of the conferees but one can confer and then have to submit their results to the non-member. Uncertainty on the part of the League as to what the United States would or could do and similar uncertainty on the part of the United States as to what the League could or would do divided the solid front which the disinterested great powers ought to have been able to make in their representations to China and Japan. In my judgment, both countries took advantage of the fact that the rest of the world was not acting together."

5) Silas H. Strawn, Chairman of the International Chamber of Commerce:

"It is of the utmost importance that preparations for any inter-governmental conference be adequate in the sense that the program be clearly outlined and some assurance be present that agreement can be reached and ratified."

"I am... of the opinion that the subject matter of a conference of this sort should be limited in scope if agreement is to be hoped for. In addition to the great problems of reparations and tariffs, there are a series of vexatious and important matters affecting trade and finance with which governments may deal co-operatively. I refer to such questions as marks of origin, sanitary regulations, customs formalities, double taxation, tariff nomenclature, and others. With these matters the Economic and Financial Committees of the League (of Nations) and the International Chamber of Commerce are occupied and upon some of them at least, I believe, progress could be made with great relief to business."

"By reason of its experience and prestige, it would seem to me that the League of Nations can best initiate such intergovernmental conferences. In certain cases where bilateral agreements would serve, the intervention of the League may be found unnecessary."

cessary. In other instances, such as the proposed Danubian Conference—though the Finance Committee of the League, I understand, initiated this action—the important governments may begin action themselves upon suggestion of interested groups with the countries concerned."

6) Honorable John H. Clarke, Former Justice of the United States:

"Another fact to be emphasized, here at the outset, is the disposition in our country to exaggerate the obligations and risks of membership in the League of Nations and to ignore or minimize the inevitable result of our remaining out of it. All men, excepting a few statesmen in the United States and Russia, agree that unless the League shall prove equal to preventing it, another war is on the way which will inevitably be so much more destructive than the last one was that no man can see what the moral, social, economic and political end of it will be. Our geographical position, our wealth and power, and the desire of every nation for our friendship, render the risks to us of joining the League much less than those of any other nation, but in another world war no other nation would have so much to lose. In all our thinking upon the subject we should remember that the alternative is—the League or another world war, with all which that involves."

7) Pitman B. Potter, Professor of International Law, University of Wisconsin.

"The League has been handicapped in its efforts to solve the Far Eastern problem by the non-membership of the United States. In the absence of such membership the attitude and action which the United States would take here is highly conjectural and its prospective willingness to co-operate with the League very uncertain. Even that co-operation when it came, seemed very capricious and uncertain in degree and direction."

8) President Franklin D. Roosevelt (In a Washington, D. C., speech, Dec. 28, 1933):

"Through the League of Nations, directly, or through its guiding motives indirectly, the states of the world in years gone by have gone forward to find something better than the old way of composing their differences."

"The League has provided a common meeting place, and it has provided machinery which serves for international discussion; and in very many practical instances of which you and I know it has helped labor and health and commerce and education and last, but not least, the actual settlement of many disputes great and small among nations great and small."

"To-day the United States is co-operating openly in the fuller utilization of the League of Nations machinery than ever before."

"I believe that I express the views of my countrymen when I state that the old policies, the old alliances, the old combinations and balances of power have proved themselves inadequate for the preservation of world peace. The League of Nations, encouraging as it does the extension of non-aggression pacts, of reduction of armaments agreements, is a prop in the world peace structure, and it must remain."

Tight Old Coughs Loosen Right Up

One little sip and the ordinary cough is gone—a few doses and that tough old hang-on cough is heard no more—it's really wonderful to watch how speedily bad, lingering colds are put out of business.

Right away that tightness loosens up—the bronchial passages clear—you're on your toes again—happy and breathing easier.

You never know what hour of the night you'll need this powerful yet harmless mixture that "acts like a flash"—so get a 45 cent bottle of Buckley's Mixture (triple acting) and keep it handy. H. A. Lewis Druggist, and all druggists sell it and money back if not delighted.

THIRD OF NOVEMBER

Glorious are the woods
In their latest gold and crimson,
Yet our full-leaved willows
Are in their latest green.
Such a kindly autumn,
So mercifully dealing
With the growths of summer,
I never yet have seen.

INTERESTING DAYS

November 1st is All Saints' Day in the Roman Catholic and Episcopalian churches. It was established because of the impossibility of keeping a separate day for each of the growing number of saints. On the cessation of persecution of the Christians in the 4th century the Greek Church set aside the first Sunday after Easter for commemorating the martyrs. And the Church of Rome, in 610 consecrated a day to Mary and all the martyrs. But it was Gregory IV who first regularly instituted the feast of all Saints Nov. 1, in 835.

Laura LaPlante, popular blonde cinema star, was born on Nov. 1, and Dennis King, handsome young patriot of hers, celebrates Nov. 2 with a birthday cake.

Lord Hugh Gough, commander in chief of the English troops in India during the Sikh wars 1845-49, was born at Woodstown in Limerick, Ireland, on Nov. 3, 1779.

Will Rogers, perhaps the most popular of American humorous stars in the films and on the radio, widely known for his witty comment on affairs of the day in his newspaper columns, was born on Nov. 4, which is also the birthday of two other lesser lights of the films, Dixie Lee and Don Alvarado.

Ida Minerva Tarbell, American women writer best known for her biographies of Lincoln, Napoleon and Mme. Roland, and her history of the Standard Oil co., was born Nov. 5, 1857, in Erie County, Pa.

Canadian insurgents under Nelson were routed at Napierville Nov. 6, 1838. The sailing vessel "Half Moon" under Capt. Henry Hudson reached England Nov. 7, 1609, at the close of the exploration which included the river and bay on this side of the water which now bear his name.

PEPPER CORN BASKETS

A dainty way to serve creamed corn, the recipe for which I obtained for you over the radio from Ann Holden, serves half a dozen people. It requires No. 2 can of whole grain corn and 4 medium-sized green peppers. Cut 3 of the peppers in half lengthwise, and the fourth one in 1-2 inch slices, making rings which are to be cut in two for the handles of the pepper baskets. Remove the seeds and a white substance from the peppers. Put all the pieces in 4 cups of boiling water and cook 5 minutes, uncovered to retain their bright color. Melt 1 tablespoon butter in the top of the double boiler and blend with 1 tablespoon flour, 1-2 teaspoon salt, and a few grains of pepper. Stir in slowly 1-2 cup cream or rich canned milk and 1-2 cup of the liquor drained off the corn. Add 2 cups of the drained corn. When thoroughly heated, bubbling hot, pour into the pepper baskets which have been set into a pan with 1-2 cup hot water poured around. Add the handles of the corn baskets, setting them midway of the long sides. Cook 15 minutes in a 350 deg. oven (medium hot). It takes about 3 tablespoons of the creamed corn for each basket, so this amount just serves six people.

CREAMED CABBAGE

A plebeian sounding dish, but one very delicious, is made by this Canada recipe: Melt 1 tablespoon butter in a saucepan, add twice as much flour, and stir fast until it is smooth. Gradually add 2 cups hot milk and stir until it thickens. Savor with a teaspoon each of salt and pepper. Pour over 2 cups of chopped cold boiled cabbage, cover over the top with cracker crumbs moistened with melted butter, and put in moderate oven until brown.

WILD DUCK

If you are lucky enough to have wild duck for the Thanksgiving feast of your small family, try cooking it after the recipe of Mrs. E. E. Chapman of St. Margaret's Guild of St. Luke's church in Vancouver, Wash. When the bird is cleaned ready for the oven, soak it in salt water 12 to 24 hours, then put it in a kettle to par-boil an hour with 1 large and 2 medium sized onions and a little salt. Remove to the baking pan. Make your dressing, using the liquid from the parboiling, and bake in oven with the dressing till tender. Duck cooked this way is fine flavored and juicy, not strong and dry as too often when cooked the ordinary way.

RARE OLD NEEDLEWORK

I want to tell you about some rare old needlework I was fortunate enough to be shown in Portland, Oregon, recently. There was a pair of Danish bed curtains of snowy hand-woven linen, hand embroidered in an intricate floral design with the maker's initials and the date, 1841, entwined in the vines. A similar, very heavy, Holland Dutch pair had an even more elaborate pattern.

A very richly colored India shawl a 19th century paisley pattern, was made of small pieces woven on a hand loom and sewed together almost invisibly by tiny hand stitching, making a beautiful flower and leaf design.

Lions, unicorns, women, birds and fruit trees were combined in a profusion of embroidery on a pair of Danish bed curtains decorated with Hedeborn drawn work. The needlewoman's initials and "1812" were worked into the design. Hedeborn means "heath." The peasants on the heaths used to make this drawn work lace after Italian patterns.

Another time I will tell more of the lovely things I saw there.

The Changing Population

Two generations ago the average age at time of death of all individuals in Massachusetts was about thirty-one years. Today it is around fifty-four—a gain of some twenty years. In the same period the average age at time of death of individuals over fifty has decreased a fraction of a year. The increase of life expectancy for all ages has been accomplished by a diversity of factors among which public health measures have played a conspicuous part. More adequate sanitation of the environment with improved water and sewerage systems, advances in bacteriology and the attack on communicable disease, combined with a concerted attempt to make personal hygiene real rather than theoretical, have all had a part in this reduction. Tuberculosis, typhoid fever, diphtheria, as well as other diseases have been decreasing; the diarrheas of infants have responded to safer milk. The infant and maternal hygiene work has saved the lives of many children and, as a result, the average age of the population has increased; but for those individuals over fifty the age specific death rates have been mounting, and the expectation of life has decreased.

There has been a change in the type of diseases which have caused death in this group. Two generations ago less than one-third of all deaths in persons over fifty years of age were due to heart disease, cancer, apoplexy, and nephritis. To-day nearly two-thirds of the deaths over fifty are certified for these causes. This change has brought with it certain conditions. The individual with a chronic degenerative disease suffers over a long period of time. The duration of these diseases usually is not short as is that of many of the acute conditions. The span of health is more adversely affected even than the span of life.

A third point to be considered is the increasing age of the population of Massachusetts. Immigration has been restricted. The birth rate has fallen. Public health activities have lowered the death rate for diseases among the young. As a result of these combined forces a large percentage of the total population is in the older age groups. Two generations ago, fifteen per cent of the population was over fifty, while today twenty per cent is in this age group. This increased population over fifty means that there are today in Massachusetts some 145,000 more individuals over fifty than there would have been had the age distribution of the population remained the same as two generations ago.

This change in the population has increased the number of individuals who have chronic disease. Chronic disease, unlike acute diseases, incapacitates for long periods of time and the economic and humanitarian aspects are combined.

Add to this the incidence of many of these cases in middle adult life and the problem of chronic disease becomes the major health problem of the present day.

EXTRACTS FROM SPEECHES

(Of Gaspar G. Bacon)

"My opponent insults the intelligence of the people of Massachusetts, when he comes before them with mere words and empty promises. He spreads before them the slogan 'Work and Wages.' Yet he offers no program, no constructive suggestion, no plans as to how he is going to furnish this work and wages for the unemployed. If he has a program, let him state it, and then we will both discuss it openly and honestly.

As a matter of fact, his record shows that he has done the exact opposite, even when making a showing of co-operating with the plan of our President. President Roosevelt has a plan of making jobs, an effective plan, under the CWA program. Every city and town of the Commonwealth was allotted work for a certain number of men. Practically all communities of the state placed more men at work than was allotted under their quota. But Boston, with Mr. Curley as mayor, fell thousands of jobs short of the city's quota.

My opponent failed the unemployed of Boston in that critical time last winter, when the program was all mapped out for him and he had only to furnish projects. Other communities found sufficient number of projects, but Mayor Curley did not have enough projects approved to place his full quota at work—and this despite the full co-operation of the State CWA Administrator Joseph W. Bartlett.

Are the people of the state, in view of this sorry showing, this failing of the unemployed, going to accept Curley's empty promise of work and wages? They are not."

"Consider the important appointments that come under the governor. In these days of violent crime, bold holdups and ruthless murder, our policing forces must be under the guidance of sound and capable executives. The governor appoints the Commissioner of Public Safety and, among others, the police commissioner of Boston. What do you imagine would be the efficiency of our police forces and what headway might the crime wave gain, if the executives of these forces were mere political henchmen with no knowledge of police work and whose only recommendation was friendship with the governor? We can well picture a disorganized and inefficient police force with crime running rampant.

What about the licensing board of Boston and the State License Commission with incapable and perhaps none too conscientious politicians sitting as members? What would afford more opportunity for graft and abuse in the granting of liquor licenses? Such a condition would be a serious consideration. The Parole Board, prison executives, judges and other positions, all of which have to do with crime, come under the governor's appointive power. What a field for corruption with incapable men holding these positions this would be."

"In the campaign which I am conducting for Governor of Massachusetts, I have directed myself primarily to a program of constructive suggestions which I believe will help our people to survive the storm through which we are passing and which will improve their future social and economic position. This program is based on principles which I have long advocated, such as minimum wage legislation, shorter working hours, permanent abolition of child labor, reduced taxation, unemployment insurance, old age security and government aid for those in want. It includes also the removal of restrictions on business, so men and women can be taken off relief rolls and placed on payrolls, adequate provision for those who on account of age are discriminated against in securing work, and lower automobile insurance rates through legislation to cut down the number of fake claims.

Up to the present time, after several months of campaigning, my opponent, Mr. Curley, has offered no issue which permits of discussion. His slogan of 'work and wages' which for a time may have fooled some of our people, has been revealed as having little or no meaning, insofar as he is concerned. This revelation became clear as soon as his public record was looked into, for as Mayor of Boston his wielding of the hatchet on employees was notorious. During the past few days he has been adopting a new pose. He has publicly declared himself to be a 'Crusader' interested solely in the humanitarian aspect of life.

It is important that the voters of Massachusetts be fully informed concerning the record of Mr. Curley, so that they may judge for themselves as to the accuracy or falsity of his varying roles. As his first term of four years as mayor of Boston was drawing to a close, and during his unsuccessful campaign for reelection in 1917, the Boston Herald, in an editorial printed on November 28, 1917, said in part: 'The people of Boston have not forgotten his cruel discharge of women in the middle of winter, his reduction of wages of men employed in the city service and of nurses in the health and hospital departments, his attempted reductions of salaries of policemen, firemen and school teachers, his orders closing gymnasiums and playgrounds, his abandoning of popular concerts in school halls; his cruel order sending old men who should have been pensioned to dig out snowdrifts in Franklin Park.'

Surely, this does not sound much like a crusading humanitarian. Four years later he was running for mayor again. The Boston American on July 12, 1921, in its leading editorial, said in part: 'He cut the wages of firemen and laborers. He closed useful public institutions and threw men out of work. He tried to cut the wages of school teachers and accused them of being a dangerous political machine. He discharged the girls who played the piano for calisthenic exercises of the children. The pitiful wages for all these girls for a whole year would not have equalled the cost of the new limousine which Curley ordered for himself at the city's expense to satisfy his bloated pride. He publicly boasted that he had reduced the salary of hospital nurses to $600 a year.'

NEW MANAGER

Glenwood J. Sherrard, President and Managing Director of the famous Parker House, and Vice-President of the Massachusetts Hotel Association, has been appointed to manage the Bellevue Hotel on Beacon Hill, Boston, according to an announcement by the trustees of the Bellevue.

Mr. Sherrard assumes his new post in addition to his duties at the Parker House in Boston, which he has managed successfully for more than a year. He will have the title of Managing Director, and has named Luther N. Grimes, formerly one of his assistants at the Parker House, as Resident Manager of the Bellevue. The Bellevue has long been a favorite stopping place for Massachusetts people, and its proximity to the Common and the State House makes it particularly advantageous for lawyers and legislators.
